Too early to draw conclusions: AAI on A-1 crash probe

Bureau's D-G calls speculation in certain sections of foreign media 'unfounded' and 'premature'

Wreckage of the Air India Boeing 787-8 Dreamliner plane placed outside Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel International Airport in Ahmedabad

DEEPAK PATEL
New Delhi, 17 July

Speculation in sections of the foreign media regarding the cause of the Air India (A-1) flight A171 crash is "unfounded" and "premature", G V G Yugandhar, director-general of the Aircraft Accident Investigation Bureau (AAIB), said on Thursday evening.

This is the first public statement by Yugandhar since the June 12 crash of Air India's Boeing 787-8 aircraft, which killed 241 of the 242 people on board.

Titled 'Appeal', his statement came hours after The Wall Street Journal (WSJ) published a report that pointed to Captain Sumet Sabharwal turning off fuel switches moments before the crash.

Yugandhar on Thursday evening said: "It is essential to respect the sensitivity of the loss faced by family members of deceased passengers, crew of the aircraft, and other deceased persons on the ground."

"It has come to our attention that certain sections of the international media are repeatedly attempting to draw conclusions through selective and unverified reporting. Such actions are irresponsible, especially while the investigation remains ongoing," he said.

The AAIB had released its preliminary report on July 12, which revealed that fuel supply to both engines was cut off shortly after takeoff. The two fuel control switches were moved to the 'cut-off' position in quick succession, and although they were turned back on about 10 seconds later, the engines had already flame out.

"The purpose of the AAIB's investigation and preliminary report is to provide information about what happened. At this stage, it is too early to reach any definite conclusions," Yugandhar said on Thursday, urging the public and media to refrain from "spreading premature narratives that risk undermining the integrity of the investigative process."

He stressed that the AAIB was investigating the crash "rigorously and most professionally" under the Aircraft (Investigation of Accidents and Incidents) Rules, 2017, which govern India's obligations under international aviation protocols, notably the International Civil Aviation Organization's Annex 13. These rules lay down procedures for impartial, non-criminal investigations focused on safety improvement rather than blame.

Yugandhar also underlined AAIB's track record, noting that it had investigated 92 accidents and 11 serious incidents since its inception in 2012. He called the A171 crash "the most devastating accident in recent aviation history".

Ctrl+Alt+Reboot: AI rewriting jobs, not ending them

A Naukri.com survey finds most Indian job seekers are more curious than anxious about AI

SURAJET DAS GUPTA
New Delhi, 17 July

For those worried about losing their jobs to artificial intelligence (AI), here's something to cheer about. A survey by the country's largest job site, Naukri.com, released on Thursday, shows that only one in three job seekers (33 per cent) across age groups fear job losses due to AI, so the majority do not.

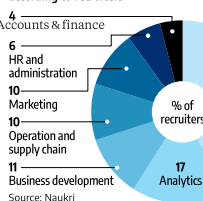

Among fresher job seekers, one in three believes AI will create more jobs. In contrast, experienced professionals expect a balance — jobs created will likely match those lost.

The survey — based on responses from over 60,000 job seekers across eight cities and more than 20 industries. It also incorporates an opinion poll of recruiters and data from thousands of job postings on the Naukri platform.

India's more optimistic view of AI

Future of jobs

Segments that see new AI-based roles according to recruiters

Source: Naukri

contrasts with that of the US, where Gallup research shows that a majority (75 per cent) of professionals believe AI could reduce job opportunities in the next decade.

But there are areas of concern. As many as 40 per cent of senior job seekers in the ₹15-lakh-plus salary band say they've felt a loss of creativity due to AI. This is more pronounced in creative industries such as advertising and marketing, animation and VFX, film and music, and emerging tech. Also, 38 per cent of those earning ₹1 crore or more fear further job losses by 2030.

The Naukri.com survey busts several myths around AI's impact. For instance, only 13 per cent of recruiters believe AI will lead to job losses — a view that lines up with what job seekers think, particularly younger, entry-level candidates.

However, job roles are shifting. Between April and June this year, job postings for machine learning (ML) engineers doubled compared to the same period last year. Postings for search engineers rose 62 per cent, data scientists 30 per cent, and cybersecurity experts 28 per cent. On the other hand, roles in mobile app development, system administration, front-end development, and white-box testing have seen sharp declines.

The belief that AI/ML job growth is hype isn't supported by data. Naukri.com listed 35,000 AI/ML jobs between April and June this year — 38 per cent more than last year — while non-AI/ML job postings grew only 8 per cent. Of these, 1,500 AI/ML roles came from Tier-II cities like Indore, Coimbatore, and Kochi, among others.

AI skills also push up salaries considerably. Based on Naukri.com job data from April to June this year, the median salary for professionals with AI skills was 53 per cent higher than for those without. Beyond information technology, hot sectors for AI jobs include accounting, knowledge process outsourcing, and banking.
